Master Plan and Implementation

DESCRIPTION

Human Nature collaborated with BWSC and Chambers Architects to renovate and improve Hills and Dales Park in Dayton, Ohio. The original design, done in the Adirondack style advocated by the parks benefactor, was completed in 1916 by the firm of Frederick Law Olmsted. This renovation project preserved and upgraded three of the park's historic camps. Design highlights include restoration of the pond at Dogwood Camp, nature-based playgrounds at White Oak Camp, extensive use of native plants, and a wetlands boardwalk trail. All three camps include improvements to parking lots, expansion of the pedestrian trail system, and preservation of desirable native trees and shrubs. This project has received an award from the Ohio Chapter ASLA.
