PROJECT PHASE

Master Plan and Implementation

DESCRIPTION

Human Nature worked closely with the Cincinnati Park Board to develop a new playground near the Twin Lakes overlook in Eden Park. The intent was to replace existing equipment with a similar variety of play events which were proven popular over the years. In addition, the design was meant to solve drainage problems, create a stronger barrier along the hillside, and build upon the quarry history of the site and use of native stone throughout the rest of the park. The result is a destination play environment that utilizes state-of-the-art nature-inspired equipment that blends into the park context. The tree-fort play structure is surrounded by limestone slab seats and boulders and a beautifully planted rain garden for the children to explore.
